

Late lessons from early warnings

It took decades for governments to respond to early warnings about tobacco, radiation and asbestos. Cellphones are a relatively new technology. With worldwide subscriptions approaching 1.7 billion and marketers turning their attention to children, should we have similar concerns about these popular wireless devices?

